The sixth annual contest of the nuc; John Gathright, 280 east Marshall. Virginia Intercollegiate Oratorical Association took place last night in the auditorium of the college of William and Mary. Every seat was taken. The exercises opened with an address by Mr.

Pound not measure up fully to public expectation, but still all of the young men acquitted themselves well. At the conclusion of the speeches the consensus of opinion was that the contest was between Williams and Mary and Emory and Henry, which proved to be true, but the judges found no difficulty in awarding the paim to the champion of "The Heroism of Love." While much disappointment is felt at the failure of old William and Mary to win the prize, yet her friends feel proud of her defender in this contest—Mr. Bland. This young man is an orator, indeed, and his oration last night was a perfect gem, and is highly spoken of by all who heard him.

After the contest the contestants and others were invited over to Taliaterro Hall, where an elegant collation was spread. Those ever-tempting viands, the ifs and ands, pros and cons of the debate were discussed until a late hour. The visiting orators all left for their colleges on this morning's train.
